THINK SHEETS

I have a “cool off” station in my classroom called “Alaska” where students are directed to go if they need a time out, whether it be teacher or student directed. I use think sheets when a student has disrupted the learning environment or community. Students fill out the think sheet. When they are ready, they bring it to me to discuss the problem and possible resolutions. After, the student rejoins the class.

BEHAVIOR PLANS & TRACKING CHARTS

I use behavior plans and tracking charts for my students with severe behavior problems. I use these with students who have IEP's for behavior, for RTI Tier 2 and Tier 3 documentation, and as an informal tool to help students manage their behavior.

First, I have my student take a "Forced Choice Menu" survey to determine what incentives will motivate them. (Forced Choice Menu can be found here: <http://www.pbisworld.com/tier-3/forced-choice-reinforcement-survey/>).

After determining the incentive the students would like to work for, we come up with a behavior plan.

BEHAVIOR TRACKING CHARTS

While developing the behavior plan, it is important to make expectations and consequences clear. If the behavior chart being used is points based, the expectation of earning a reward should be 65% or higher.

At the beginning of implementation, help your student complete the behavior chart. As students become familiar with the system, you can transfer the responsibility over to them (still conferencing with the student about what they are doing well and what they need to work on).

If student behavior improves for an extended amount of time, try to decrease the use of the chart and eventually the incentive.
