Let's Explore!: Hieroglyphics

Hieroglyphics is a complicated form of ancient written communication that uses symbols. There are over 1000 different symbols that can be used to represent different sounds, like our alphabet letters do, or different words. Hieroglyphics can be written in any directions, which makes them hard to read. The writer had no way to include punctuation either. Scribes were people trained in the art of hieroglyphics. They would write and read the language for others. Although difficult, the picture symbols create beautiful works of art.

Directions: Click the link to type a message using hieroglyphics. Snap a photo of your message and paste it in the box below.

Egypt is known as a transcontinental country because it lies in both Africa and Asia. If it were not for the Nile River, that runs from the south to the north, Egypt would be completely covered in desert lands. The average rainfall is usually about an inch all year long. The capital city, Cairo, is located in the Nile River Delta and is covered in farmland. Most Egyptians are Muslim, which means they follow the Islamic religion. In Egyptian culture, nature is highly valued. Ancient painting almost always include plants and animals of the regions, which range from camels to hippos. The economy in Egypt thrives off of tourism. Many people from all over the world come to the country each year to see the famous pyramids and other historical sites.
