

GRAND CANYON

VIRTUAL field trip

Ancestral Puebloans

Humans have been living at the Grand Canyon for almost 4,000 years. Many of these people belong to different Native American and American Indian tribes. A tribe is a group of people who belong to the same family or community. Members of a tribe have the same cultural and religious beliefs.

The Ancestral Puebloans were some of the Grand Canyon's first settlers. Since the time of the Ancestral Puebloans, many more tribes have called the Grand Canyon their home. Head to the next slide to learn about these tribes.

SOCIAL STUDIES

Develop a deeper understanding of history by learning about the Grand Canyon.

What is the Grand Canyon?

What is a canyon?

The Grand Canyon is one of nature's greatest masterpieces in the entire world. A canyon is a deep valley with steep sides. Most canyons have water flowing through them, such as rivers or streams.

The Grand Canyon is 277 miles long, 18 miles wide, and over a mile deep. It is one of the largest canyons in the world. The Grand Canyon has been forming over millions of years and is still growing!

INTEGRATES READING

Short reading passages build background and introduce key vocabulary in meaningful and manageable chunks.

STEAM:

Watch the science experiment on erosion, then try experiment on your own! This resource makes a connection between STEAM and real-life.

Science Experiment

Watch the science experiment on erosion.

Then try experiment on your own!

What materials did you use?

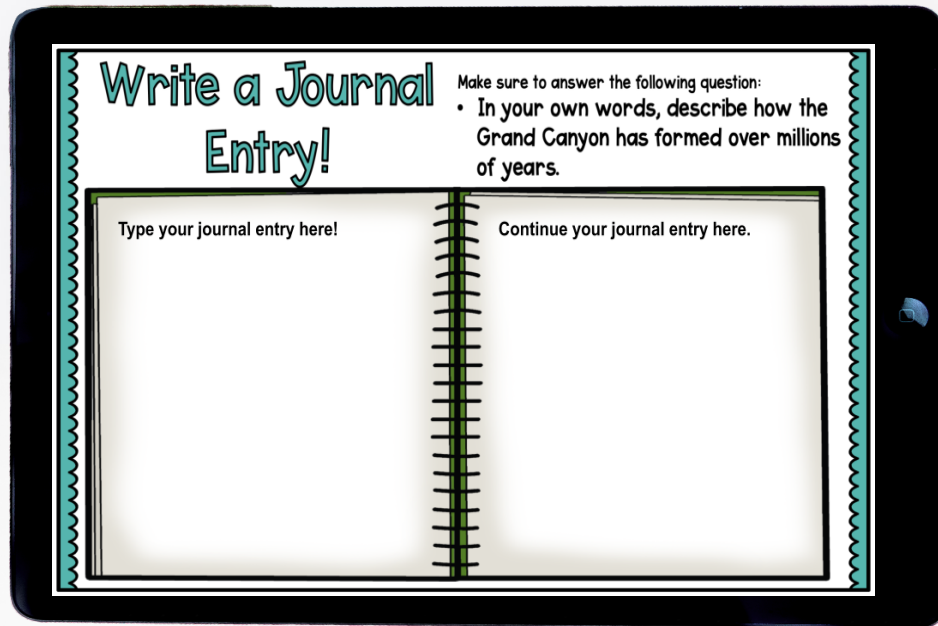

What evidence did you observe to prove that erosion occurred?
