Point of View

Escape the Cartoon Escape Room

PRINTABLE • GOOGLE • WEBSCAPE™

Here at Toon Labs, we take cartoons seriously. Perhaps too seriously. I'm afraid your team has taken their work too far and become trapped in the Toon-Universe. It's going to take our best and brightest to get them out, and you'll have to learn to think like a Toon if you want to help!

Let's go!

1. Collect the lightbulb.
2. Collect the DNA strand.
3. Collect the goggles.
4. Collect the magnifying glass.

After each challenge, place your item in your television set.

Escape the Toon-Universe!
Students won't realize they are practicing Point of View skills! They will be immersed in the storytelling and our original videos as they complete reading comprehension challenges.

4 Reading Challenges

Challenge #1

Read the stories and answer the questions to master Toon Physics.

1.

Point of View

4. What is Roslin's point of view about peanut butter and jelly sandwiches?
- Jelly should go first on the sandwich.
  - Tuna sandwiches for lunch would mean no arguing.
  - It does not matter which order the ingredients go on the sandwich.
  - Peanut butter should go first on the sandwich.
5. What might Lyle's voice sound like when he says the following?
"Stop! What are you doing?"
- Lyle would sound anxious.
  - Lyle would sound confident.
  - Lyle would sound silly.
  - Lyle would sound upset.
6. How does Roslin act toward Lyle's point of view?
- Roslin is angry about Lyle's point of view.
  - Roslin finds humor in Lyle's point of view.
  - Roslin is upset about Lyle's point of view.

Peanut Butter and Jelly

Roslin and her cousin Lyle had worked tirelessly, raking leaves in her backyard until they had a massive mound. Now the yard was spotless, but their bellies were grumbling. Roslin led Lyle inside to have a late lunch.

"How about peanut butter and jelly sandwiches?" She put two plates carefully on the counter.

"Sure," Lyle grabbed the loaf of bread. He set two slices on each plate in an orderly fashion.

Roslin brought over jars of peanut butter and jelly. She delicately lifted a butter knife from the utensil drawer. After unscrewing the lid on one of the jars, she dipped the knife into the sticky grape jelly.

Just as she was about to spread the jelly on the first slice of bread, Lyle shouted, "Stop! What are you doing?"

Roslin's body and facial expression froze. "I'm making peanut butter and jelly sandwiches to eat. You agreed we'd have them for lunch. Have you changed your mind?"

Her brows crinkled in confusion. The jelly slid a little lower on the knife, gravity taking over.

"The peanut butter goes on first, followed by a healthy topping of jelly," Lyle quickly grabbed a second knife. He opened the other jar and scooped out a hefty glob of creamy peanut butter.

"It doesn't matter which one you put on first," Roslin said indignantly.

"Sure, it does," Lyle spread the peanut butter on the bread in an even layer. "They don't call them jelly and peanut butter sandwiches."

Roslin laughed at her silly cousin, letting out a snort. "I always put the jelly first."

"Well, I always put the peanut butter first," Lyle said, as he shrugged his shoulders.

Roslin shook her head. "Maybe we should have opened the can of tuna instead!"

Challenge #2

Floating

Summer has officially arrived! I will finally begin my productive vacation break. My goal for this season is to learn how to swim without assistance. My older brother, Malik, graciously offered to teach me. I hope I will be on my own in no time. We have a brand-new pool and I will be confidently lapping in the deep end soon.

"Let's begin with the basics: floating," Malik declares as we wade into the shallow side.

"Floating? But I really want to just master swimming." My arms glide through the air, making a structured swimming motion.

"You will, Zayan," Malik mutters under his breath. He seemed to be annoyed by my eagerness. "Be patient and learn some important basics first." He guides me onto my back and tells me to pretend I'm a leaf on the surface of the water. "Relax and let your body be light."

Point of View

4. What type of narration is used in the story?

- a. First person narration: Zayan is telling the story.
- b. First person narration: Malik is telling the story.
- c. Third person narration: Zayan's parent is telling the story.
- d. Third person narration: an outside character is telling the story.

5. How does the point of view shape the tone of the story?

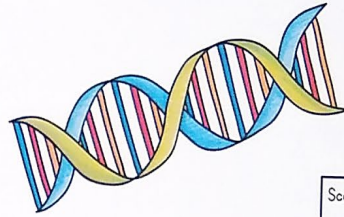

- a. The narrator is telling the story from their perspective, which makes the tone candid.
- b. The narrator is outside the story, which makes the tone approachable.
- c. The narrator is telling the story from their perspective, which makes the tone humorous.
- d. The narrator is outside the story, which makes the tone neutral.

6. Why did the author choose to tell this story from Zayan's point of view?

- a. The author wanted readers to be afraid of swimming.
- b. The author wanted readers to learn to swim too.
- c. The author wanted readers to understand how Zayan felt.
- d. The author wanted readers to like Malik.
