February

February relieves January of all its winter duties and takes the icy reins to deliver snowflake beauties.

Frigid air still freezes
the white and barren land.
Something warm and toasty comes to take your hand.

It curls around your heart
with a fire that only grows.
It heats y... lonely soul
... thaws your frosty nose.

Suddenly the world is red with roses by the bunch.
Chocolates march your way
and you can't wait to munch.

February brings a feeling on its fourteenth day.
Love melts winter's ice.
I hope it's here to stay.

Cupid's Mission

There's a funny-looking angel, flying around my head.
He's got blond, curly hair.
His cheeks are really red.

I keep swatting him away,
but he keeps coming back.
I offered him some money
and even a tasty snack.

Why won't he leave me be?
And what's with the bow and arrow?
I'm really concerned now that his blue eyes are kinda narrow.

He sets up an arrow
and takes aim with his bow.
I brace myself for impact,
but I never feel the blow.

4. Which of the following stanzas from the poem is best expressed by the illustration?

He sets up an arrow and takes aim with his bow. I brace myself for impact, but I never feel the blow.	A warm light surrounds me, and my heart feels really full. I dance around in a circle, then suddenly feel a pull	I keep swatting him away, but he keeps coming back. I offered him some money and even a tasty snack.	Why won't he leave me be? And what's with the bow and arrow? I'm really concerned now that his blue eyes are kinda narrow.
