Leaving home for college has been a change the size of Texas! Meeting so many new people while exploring a new state has been great. At the same time, I really miss my family. I especially miss my mother's home-cooked meals. My mom's sizzling steaks were always my favorite. I wish one would magically appear right now. She tried to teach me how to grill steak once. I didn't feel like learning to use the grill. Now I really wish I had. I have eaten enough frozen pizza in the past month to feed a small army! I really miss home. And my mom's steaks.

He had beat his fear and completed the dare!

I was so excited when I heard the school bus coming up the street! As it pulled up to the house, I knew my human was finally home. I was ready to give them a super-sized, sweet, sloppy smooch! My tail wagged wildly as I waited. It was raining cats and dogs outside. This made my human take a million years to get off the bus. Her umbrella was as old as dirt and was tricky to get open most of the time. After what felt like a lifetime, she was finally walking up the sidewalk. I was so excited I danced like a star on Broadway! My human was home, and I got to play with her all afternoon! I was as happy as a clam!

The phrase "super-sized, sweet, sloppy smooch" is an example of which type of figurative language?

- metaphor
- personification
- alliteration
- simile
